NOW READY,
IMPERIAL QUARTO.
ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY,
WITH THE
PUNTI AND MANDARIN
PRONUNCIATION:
AN ANGLO-CHINESE DICTIONARY, by the Rev. W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations have imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a most economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and disposing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, OCTOBER 1st, 1869.

THE article which was extracted yesterday from the S. C. & C. Gazette, on the peculiar form of opium smuggling, which has latterly sprung up in Shanghai, places the matter in a very ugly light for those engaged in this questionable traffic, and it may be hoped that it will have the effect of putting an end to a practice, which certainly must seem, at least to persons at a distance, to lay the Model Settlement open to some of the worst charges, that have ever been made against it. At the same time, it is only justice to point out that the article in question places the matter in the very strongest point of view in which it can be regarded as against those who are concerned in it; and that the probability is they do not consider themselves to be doing anything more than they are fairly entitled to do by their treaty rights. The question is one of those unfortunately involved and vexed problems, which result from the disingenuousness and dishonesty of the Chinese officials; who, not content with the legitimate independence secured to them by the Treaty, endeavour, on every occasion, to stretch their authority to the extent of stultifying the provisions made for the fair protection of foreign trade and interests. Repulsive as the idea must be to all right thinking Europeans, it really often seems with respect to subjects of this nature, that their only solution is to be found upon the principle that two blacks in some instances do make as white. At least such is the practical issue to which they must be brought, except foreigners are to place themselves on every occasion in the absurd position, too often adopted, of aiding the Chinese in the very arrangements which are directly turned against the foreigner's rights. The matter at present under consideration may be briefly stated as follows. By Treaty, an Import Duty of Tls. 30 a chest is agreed to on opium, and the Chinese have the right to levy whatever local or transit dues they may consider it fit to impose, contrary to the rule applying to the other imports, in virtue of the Transit Dues clause. Upon the strength of this, they take two steps—the one questionable, the other undoubtedly a breach of Treaty provisions. First, they levy a double duty actually in the foreign settlement, where the opium is imported; and, secondly, they levy it in such a manner that they produce what is practically a monopoly of the Trade in the hands of one or two Guilds. On the question whether the levy of the extra Tls. 30 in the Settlement is justifiable, depends that of whether aiding the Chinese in evading the payment can in any way be defended; from the undoubted unjustifiableness of the monopoly system, it results that, whatever may be held with respect to the first point, the Chinese cannot obtain any redress in English, and, presumably, in most foreign, tribunals.

With regard to the first point itself, it must be confessed that there seems to be room for considerable argument. Making the widest allowance for the peculiar system of levying duties in force among the Chinese, the very least that a stipulation by Treaty for a given import duty at a given port can be held to provide, is, that the payment of that duty franks the article for sale at the port where it is landed; and the imposition of an additional duty before it is allowed to be there sold, would certainly seem a distinct violation of the provision. It would not be too much also to assume that the payment of an Import Duty, at a given port, would frank the goods to a reasonable distance around it; as without taking this view, the stipulation with regard to the Duty is simply meaningless, seeing that it fixes no amount whatever, and leaves the Chinese free to levy, at the port of entry, any sum they please. Whether they levy it in one amount, or in two, is of little consequence in its practical results.

It may be fairly presumed that those who have entered upon the traffic, have come to the conclusion that the tax which they aid the Chinese in evading, is an illegal one; but, even supposing this to be the case, it can hardly be held that they are justified in aiding the natives to evade it. At all events, in doing so, they place themselves in a very questionable position, especially when the Opium is not their bona fide property, but is only so called with the express object of evading a levy. If the tax were made upon their own property, their proper course would be to represent the matter to their authorities, and have it remedied; though, unfortunately, it must be confessed, experience shows in an ordinary way, they would have little chance of redress in that manner. But it can hardly be held that a foreigner is justified in lending his name to a transaction, so as to make the ownership of the goods appear different from what it really is, when the cargo, opium, is that with respect to which the spirit of the Treaty was not to place any limit on the powers of the Chinese to tax it as they like. With regard to other foreign Imports, where the foreigner, by payment of a transit due, purchases the distinct right to have the goods conveyed to any part of the country free of other tax, without reference to whether they belong to Chinese or to foreigners, the matter certainly stands morally, though perhaps not legally, on a different basis. Although a man of an upright and truthful disposition may feel that it is a questionable thing for him to declare himself the owner of goods which do not bona fide belong to him, still the offence is of a venial nature, if is designed not to evade a law, but to prevent a wrong.

In either case the Chinese authorities place themselves in the same position as, whether the local duty of Tls. 30 can be justifiably levied on Opium or not, there is no question that the needs in which it is levied is an infringement of the Treaty, and they cannot, therefore, claim the protection of the consular and judicial authorities to aid them in carrying out what is a wrong on their own part. It may be hoped that the attention now being called to this matter may lead to a thorough reconsideration of the whole question of local and transit dues, which, under present arrangements, cannot but be a source of repeated trouble and annoyance.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.
SEPTEMBER 30th.

Present:—
H. E. THE GOVERNOR,
The Acting CHIEF JUSTICE,
The COLONIAL SECRETARY,
The COLONIAL TREASURER,
Hon. H. B. GIBB,
Hon. W. KESWICK,
Hon. J. B. TAYLOR,
Hon. R. ROWETT.

The Council met yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock, and after reading the minutes, the GOVERNOR laid on the table two memoranda, which had been prepared for the purpose of forwarding to the Home Government. He said that these were most important returns, and would be found of great interest: the first was a summary of returns of piracy and robbery in China waters, reported to the police-office from 1st January 1864, to August 15th of the present year. Although these returns commenced in 1864, it was only from 1867 that the figures could be relied upon as entirely correct, for the reason that previous to that year reports of piracy were sent to different officers, and accordingly they could only be aware of those of which the police had cognizance. He thought the return as a whole was exceedingly satisfactory, especially when it was considered that previous to 1867, reports of piracy were sent to the Harbour Master, Registrar-General, or Magistrates. He found this practice in force when he first came to the Colony, but soon gave directions that they should all be sent to one department, viz., the Police. This would explain the remark made by Mr. Deane, at the foot of the tabular statement now before them that previous to July 1867, the returns included only piracies recorded at his office, which amounted probably to only one half the real number of piracies that occurred in the Colony previous to that time. The figures showed remarkable improvement in the Junk system, and if they were truthful, they were most satisfactory. He regretted to notice that within a few days a foreign vessel had been attacked so near to the Colony, it was a long time since such an affair had occurred. A few years ago, no doubt, a great many of these piracies were planned in Hongkong, but the statistics before the Council would show that a much less number were planned here now, and that the Colony had to a great extent been relieved by the measures passed by this Council. The next table, detailing the number of cases of larceny by servants, was also prepared for transmission to the Home Government, and probably a more remarkable return had never been laid on the table of a Legislative Body. One thing to be looked for as a consequence of Licensed Gambling Houses would be an increase of crimes of this description, and he at first had argued a priori, that such would be the case, but on enquiry he found it had not been the experience at Macao, nor was it now the experience in this Colony. Previous to the Licensed Gambling all these cases were not recorded, but the record was far better and more correctly kept now, and it could not be said that the improved figures were the result of omissions in the first quarter of the year in which Gambling had been licenced, there were eighty-two cases recorded, but the system was not then so well in hand; as subsequently, the next quarter showing a material diminution. The lowest quarter were the second one of the current year, which only fifteen cases were recorded. After examination of these figures, he thought the Council would agree with him in the opinion that the average had now been reached, which in the normal condition of this class of the community would always be prone to result from gambling. On various occasions when servants had been detected in very flagrant cases of larceny from their masters, very heavy fines had been inflicted upon the licencees of the Gambling Houses, since which time he had had very little reason to complain. The honourable Mr. Keswick on an excellent inspection, the inspectors were changed every month, and regular reports were sent in by each of them, accordingly there was no chance for any collusion between the inspectors and the Licencees. The third memorandum was laid before the Council pro formâ, so that any member could make any remarks or bring forward any motion he might wish. It arose out of some remarks which appeared in the London and China Express, written by the Secretary of the Anglo-American Council at Shanghai. He wished to speak with every respect regarding this body. They had more than once been held up to him as a model, in many respects it would be unwise to think, but in many difficult circumstances, they had legislated with great wisdom.

THE BUILDING ORDINANCE.

The GOVERNOR said that in resuming legislative business, he would call the attention of the Council to the Building Ordinance, it was the heavy Bill they had before them, and in the absence of the Acting Attorney-General, who was not yet returned, and who seemed to think the Government measures were in no danger of being attacked by the non-official members, he had referred the Ordinance to the Acting Chief-Justice. Although it had once before been in the hands of Mr. BALL while Acting Attorney-General, it still required legal supervision. There was not a great deal to explain, but the members should keep in mind what were the real objects of the Ordinance.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE said that he spoke with some diffidence, with regard to those portions of the Ordinance relating to how building should be carried on, especially as this subject had been most fully enquired into by gentlemen composing the commission, who had also taken all the evidence they found necessary. He thought it would be very bad to pass an Ordinance that would interfere with the taste of the Public with regard to any building, which they might individually wish to carry on, or that would give the Surveyor-General the right to say that this or that front was not sufficiently ornamental. There was an impression prevailing in the community that the Surveyor-General had more power than it was intended to give him, or than it would be healthy for him to exercise—if there was anything of which the Public was jealous, it was the taste to be displayed on their own buildings. The new Ordinance had been mainly taken from the one now in force and the Imperial Act, and with regard to its legal parts great changes were needed. Notwithstanding that the Ordinance had been so long under consideration, he thought there might still be much improvement made at the present session. One suggestion which had occurred to him was that the whole Ordinance should be divided into two parts, which would render it easier of comprehension by the Chinese; it might be better perhaps if the Council went through the whole Ordinance now, and those gentlemen, who were on the commission could state why certain clauses had been retained or inserted. Another alternative was to leave the old Ordinance, now well understood by the Chinese, having been in force over ten years as it was, and pass a short Ordinance, containing those additions, which were found to be necessary—there were a great many provisions in the new Ordinance that were not absolutely necessary for the public welfare. It was well enough to have a nicely and regularly built town, and if M. Haussmann was here, we might have a beautiful boulevard, xe, but is a place like Hongkong more practical considerations were necessary.

The GOVERNOR said if the Government were to have any imposition over buildings it must be in the hands of the Surveyor-General; if there were to be any rules framed for the protection of buildings against fire, they must be in a measure prohibitory, and therefore appear some what harsh.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE called attention to section 9, which was to the effect: "All Works shall be under the Survey and Inspection of the Surveyor-General, and shall be commenced, resumed, prosecuted, and completed with due observance of this Ordinance and particularity of the rules next following." These words had given rise to the idea that everything was subject to the Surveyor-General, and although this might not be the design of the Ordinance, the language was calculated to mislead. He did not say that any such power was in reality given, but the wording of the Ordinance had given rise to the idea that the Surveyor-General was omnipotent, he suggested the Council should go into committee, and read over the Ordinance section by section.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said he thought the Public were most unnecessarily alarmed. In the new Ordinance, there were twenty one new clauses introduced, which were almost entirely, merely exemptions and definitions; the additions were very simple, and there was nothing in them to alarm the public.

The GOVERNOR said that the most of the gentlemen who composed the commission were owners of property in Hongkong themselves, and they would not have been likely to have put anything in the Ordinance prejudicial to the interests of the owners of property; if there was any one clause in the new Ordinance that was not absolutely necessary or essential, he would like to have it pointed out.

The Hon. WILLIAM KESWICK said he thought the expressions of alarm had been confined entirely to this Council Chamber, he had not heard of them elsewhere. The Surveyor-General's power, under the new Ordinance, would, it was hoped, be limited. He had not been able to detect anything in the Ordinance likely to cause alarm, and he had read it over carefully more than once, the meaning and intention of it was clear. It was intended that what was now done under the old Ordinance illegally, should under the proviso of the new Ordinance be legalized by it alone, it was intended to define the exact extent to which a person was at liberty to go in putting up a building, and it also prohibited every person who might wish to experiment from carrying out eccentricities whithout regard to the general weal.

The Hon. H. ROWETT said that if the consideration of the Ordinance could be postponed, he would be glad to circulate among the members of Council some notes which he had just received from Mr. Dirck and which he thought great value.

The GOVERNOR asked if there was any one provision in the Ordinance that was considered unnecessary.

The Honorable R. ROWETT said that he held with Mr. Dirck, that there were many. In section 3, that all walls constructed of brick, stone, or some other hard and incombustible substance must be approved of by the Surveyor-General. Now, he did not see why it was necessary that the particular kind of brick, and stone used in a wall should necessarily have such approval. Again, section 3, the thickness of cross walls was a subject for objection.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE said that these clauses were purely technical, and with regard to all such the commission had been strictly enjoined to be thoroughly competent to judge; if every section had been investigated by the commission, he would have nothing more to say further than with regard to the legal defects. In section 5, the word "owner" was speaking, while in another part the words "occupant or owner" were used. Now it was very important to know who the owner of a building was, in order that the proper person might be called upon in all cases of neglect. It should be the person who received the rents and profits, and the same might be occupying a single room. Again, section 37 ought to be modified and improved.

The Hon. R. ROWETT here rose and said that he begged to move that a further consideration of this Ordinance should be referred to a Committee, to consist of the Acting Chief-Justice, the Colonial Secretary and the non-official members of the Council. This motion was seconded by the Hon. the Colonial Treasurer, and the ordinance was referred accordingly.

GOOD ORDER ORDINANCE.

The GOVERNOR next called the attention of the council to a short Ordinance, enabling the Harbour Master and the Captain Superintendent of Police to clear the roads in cases of public processions and ceremonies. It was the same power as was given to the Commissioner of Police in England for removing obstructions in streets. The only provisions he looked upon with doubt was that relating to printing the notice in English and Chinese, he might found impracticable to be able to comply with this. The Superintendent of Police had said that the sampans were under the cognizance of the water police, and he therefore thought they ought to have power under this ordinance, but the Governor was afraid to add to the offices having charge of the same ground. The superintendent of Police could easily make any suggestions to the Harbour-Master which he might found necessary, for sampans but it was very much better they should be carried out under the Harbour-Master's direction.

The Honorable WILLIAM KESWICK suggested that all such regulations should be notified in the Gazette, there was no cause for haste in a matter of this kind in this Colony. As the Ordinance was not present, he thought it was likely to create alarm among the Chinese, when they became aware that they were liable to be seized and kept in prison over night merely because they had not seen the printed notice. He did not think the Colony required the regulations set forth in this Ordinance.

The Honorable H. B. GIBB asked if it was not merely a Police regulation to keep the streets clear and to remove obstructions.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE said that the Acting Attorney-General had looked into the matter, and found that it was necessary by the existing laws in this Colony to have an Ordinance giving the required powers to the Police.

The Honorable H. B. GIBB asked if the present Police regulations did not give power to the Police to put chairs off one side of the road or other.

The GOVERNOR replied that although such power was exercised, it did not in reality exist. After some further corrections as to the title and wording, the Ordinance being read a second time, was passed, and numbered No. 10 of 1869.

THE PRESERVATION OF BIRDS.

The GOVERNOR said that the community had lately had their attention drawn to the wilful destruction of birds in the Colony. There were not a great many on the Island, but he thought an Ordinance of this kind would very much tend to increase the population, and he knew there were many people in the colony who took a great interest in birds. He was not sure whether this was the proper way to put a stop to the destruction, perhaps it might be better that all persons who were found with destructive instruments in their possession out of doors should be fined, if they could not produce a licence for possession of the same; he noticed that a great many birds were killed with blow pipes which the Chinese used. The Ordinance was read a first time.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

At the suggestion of the Colonial Secretary the GOVERNOR referred to this Ordinance, which he said at present stood adjourned from the last meeting.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE enquired why the clause inserted in the original draft of the existing Ordinance referring to Mail Steamers had been expunged by the Home Government.

The GOVERNOR replied that it was found that the same power was conferred by the Imperial Act, and it was not therefore considered necessary to re-enact such a clause. Considerable conversation ensued between the Governor and Acting Chief-Justice relative to this clause in the Ordinance. The Acting Chief-Justice saying that it was most important that the matter should be clearly understood, on account of the large number of emigrants who left the Colony monthly by the Pacific Mail Steamers.

The GOVERNOR said that he thought it would be better that the second reading should be further adjourned. The Ordinance was a most important one, and he would be sorry to see it thrown into open market. Another alternative was to leave the old Ordinance, now well understood by the Chinese, having been in force over ten years as it was, and pass a short Ordinance, containing those additions, which were found to be necessary—there were a great many provisions in the new Ordinance that were not absolutely necessary for the public welfare. It was well enough to have a nicely and regularly built town, and if M. Haussmann was here, we might have a beautiful boulevard, xe, but is a place like Hongkong more practical considerations were necessary.

The GOVERNOR said if the Government were to have any imposition over buildings it must be in the hands of the Surveyor-General; if there were to be any rules framed for the protection of buildings against fire, they must be in a measure prohibitory, and therefore appear some what harsh.

The Acting CHIEF-JUSTICE called attention to section 9, which was to the effect: "All works shall be under the Survey and Inspection of the Surveyor-General, and shall be commenced, resumed, prosecuted, and completed with due observance of this Ordinance and particularity of the rules next following." These words had given rise to the idea that everything was subject to the Surveyor-General, and although this might not be the design of the Ordinance, the language was calculated to mislead. He did not say that any such power was in reality given, but the wording of the Ordinance had given rise to the idea that the Surveyor-General was omnipotent, he suggested the Council should go into committee, and read over the Ordinance section by section.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said he thought the Public were most unnecessarily alarmed. In the new Ordinance, there were twenty one new clauses introduced, which were almost entirely, merely exemptions and definitions; the additions were very simple, and there was nothing in them to alarm the public.

The GOVERNOR said that the most of the gentlemen who composed the commission were owners of property in Hongkong themselves, and they would not have been likely to have put anything in the Ordinance prejudicial to the interests of the owners of property; if there was any one clause in the new Ordinance that was not absolutely necessary or essential, he would like to have it pointed out.

The Hon. WILLIAM KESWICK said he thought the expressions of alarm had been confined entirely to this Council Chamber, he had not heard of them elsewhere. The Surveyor-General's power, under the new Ordinance, would, it was hoped, be limited. He had not been able to detect anything in the Ordinance likely to cause alarm, and he had read it over carefully more than once, the meaning and intention of it was clear. It was intended that what was now done under the old Ordinance illegally, should under the proviso of the new Ordinance be legalized by it alone, it was intended to define the exact extent to which a person was at liberty to go in putting up a building, and it also prohibited every person who might wish to experiment from carrying out eccentricities whithout regard to the general weal.

The Hon. H. ROWETT said that if the consideration of this Ordinance could be postponed, he would be glad to circulate among the members of Council some notes which he had just received from Mr. Dirck and which he thought great value.

The GOVERNOR asked if there was any one provision in the Ordinance that was considered unnecessary.

The Honorable H. B. GIBB asked if the present Police regulations did not give power to the Police to put chairs off one side of the road or other.

The GOVERNOR replied that although such power was exercised, it did not in reality exist. After some further corrections as to the title and wording, the Ordinance being read a second time, was passed, and numbered No. 10 of 1869.

THE PRESERVATION OF BIRDS.

The GOVERNOR said that the community had lately had their attention drawn to the wilful destruction of birds in the Colony. There were not a great many on the Island, but he thought an Ordinance of this kind would very much tend to increase the population, and he knew there were many people in the colony who took a great interest in birds. He was not sure whether this was the proper way to put a stop to the destruction, perhaps it might be better that all persons who were found with destructive instruments in their possession out of doors should be fined, if they could not produce a licence for possession of the same; he noticed that a great many birds were killed with blow pipes which the Chinese used. The Ordinance was read a first time.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES FOR 1868.

In bringing forward the Bills for the above vote for the second reading, the GOVERNOR observed that $33,000 the amount that had to be voted in them, was much smaller than on any previous occasion; he would go over the items in excess in detail. At page 5, there was the sum of $119.55, which was for furniture at Government houses. In the Colonial Secretary's department an omission had been made, in providing for the salaries of the Interpreters. Under the head of contingencies were included provision for printing and stationary. In the Surveyor-General's department was included the salary of the Inspector of Buildings, who formerly had been paid from the police, with which however he had nothing to do. There were also allowances for his chair hire, and for fitting up a proper place, in which to deposit the deeds, and other valuable documents of the Colony, although these were now protected from fire, there was another danger to which they were still exposed, viz., damp, and it would be necessary soon to have a strong room, that could be heated during certain portions of the year with hot water pipes. The excess in the Harbour Master's department arose from the purchase and painting of the powder hulk, and the repairs to that remarkable vessel—the Preposterous. The excess in the Stamp Collector's office was for the renewal of dies. The Fire Brigade was entirely new, and when the estimates were framed, there was none. He was happy to say that there was now in existence a very efficient Brigade. The excess of expenditure at the Gaol was one which ought not to have arisen, and was caused by the original estimates being inadequate; he had ordered the mistake to be corrected for the future. There were good accommodation in the Colony for fifteen hundred prisoners, but there were seldom over four hundred and fifty, and it would be remarkable if the number should increase to five hundred. The Estimate for provisions was made by the Governor of the Gaol, who like all heads of departments liked to see the expenditure of his own as low as possible. The next item was the passage money of the Mint officers, and the next was excess on this amount estimated for Roads, Streets, and Bridges. There had been a large saving in the Surveyor-General's department, as would be seen by reference to the Estimates. The last item was that for binding, the Ordinances in England. Some profit was expected from their sale in this Colony, but as yet the amount was small. On page 10 would be found a useful and interesting schedule in which the original sums in the Estimates were put down, and the sums expended under authority of the Secretary of State, or the Governor, not in accordance with the sub-heads of the Estimates, although covered by the votes. At page 13, particulars of this expenditure were set out. At page 16 it would be noticed that the savings, on Works and Buildings were detailed, while the former shewed a total of $109,000 against an excess of $81,000, thus shewing a clear saving of $28,000

THE LOST PRINCE.
A SHANGHAI LAMENT.

"O where and O where
Is my royal laddie gone?"—OLD SONG.

Last week, as I was going by
Trent lordly mansion in Shanghai,
Where tiffin mixed with broking dry
Their cup with sherry shake,
I saw a most confusing press
Of various men, in various dress,
Gesticulate in wild distress
As tho' their hearts would break.

Some turned them East, some turned them
Veering, like weathercocks passes't; [West,
While one spoke up above the rest,
A sherry-loving man:—
Upon his breast, this Knight of fame.
His beard flowed down like yellow flame;
They told me, when I asked his name,
He'd just come from Japan.

Alas! alas! they could not choose,
But hear his desolating news—
Then, wild as ocean birds,
And in a tone that showed their views,
They "gave their sorrow words."

O Lord! O dear! our hearts will break; we shall no stick stark staving wild.
We're not to see, after all, in the Model Settlement, Victoria's second child;
To think of the trouble and expense we've gone through in electing a Reception Committee;
And, now, he'll go away and believe the lines of Somerset that this is a sink of iniquity;
Just as we had a chance to clear ourselves, and show we're much better than Hongkong;
And that even a naval officer might find moral amusement here, if he did not stay too long.
The last time as ever we heard of him, it was with some little surprise.
Speculating, with little Lord Claude in New Zealand, a playing at making little gold pies.
And if his ship has to stop outside Woosung, it isn't as very far;
And we'd have sent out one of Mr. Tumbles' gunboats to bring him in over the Bar.
Perhaps he's been kept away, and naturally too, by the fear
That some S. S. N. Leviathan will run down the Calatea.
If she did, he'd have to take his case to the U.S. Courts for damages,
Though findings there are as much alike as photographs at Cunningde's.
Then he might take a passage home in a ship as a joke, and none could be finer;
And, no doubt, Mr. C. Jamieson would promptly make him out a minor.
And the Club shouldn't have been shut up till he came, and we'd have shown him the new jail;
And tho' the Consul has run away, our merchant princes would have taken him in and given him some of Evans's ale.
There's no Femme here to shoot him in the back; and then there's another bother;
The Germans were going to give him a fête because he's heir to Saxe Coburg Gotha.
And they generally do it pretty well, and would most surely have amused him;
And he might have asked them all to pay their taxes, and they couldn't have refused him.
His going to Chefoo's all right, for he's fond of ladies' society;
But he won't get any more gold if he goes, for Alabaster only got up the mines for a little variety.
Though the plenipos going home, one don't like to accuse him of a design so sinister,—
But perhaps he's been inveigled to Pekin for the sake of his good word by the Minister.
Come, Alfred, come; we know you can; we've made our preparation;
And think the coils and costs we've been at, should meet some reparation.
Our amateurs shall mine on strong, as Harkaways or Hamlets;
And Mr. Leonard will cover all the Customs' Wharf with confiscated camlets.
We'll do our best to do away with all official drynesses,
Addresses and loyees, and may it please your Royal Highnesses.
Oh! bless the day when we can say, "To-morrow, oh to-morrow;
We'll all get up, and go and greet the Duke of Edinboro'!"—N. C. Daily News.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—The Gazette de Lausanne states that Madame Wahlenschaff, wife of the director of the Dresden Bank, with their only son, a lad of 13, was on the bridge of the Lutschine, at Grindelwald, when the husband and a guide, who had remained together a short distance behind, observed an enormous block of ice carried along by the violence of the stream. Recalled to Madame Wahlenschaffe by her either he was not heard by her or she was paralyzed by terror, for she remained motionless and the immense mass, being impelled against the frail structure, carried it away with both the mother and the son. Their bodies were not found until the following day.

Life in India.

No. III.—BOMBAY.

(Norwood News.)

There is an annual Hindoo festival, called the Dasailloo, or New Year's Day, occurring in October or November, when all merchants balance their books and ascertain what they are worth; after which, a general illumination takes place, and congratulatory visits are exchanged—the effect of the principal streets is gorgeous in the extreme; each house, each window, each room, is lit up, from the ground floor to the roof with myriads of coloured lamps and splendid chandeliers, and the whole scene, with its crowds of gaily dressed natives, handsome equipages, showy horses, bands of music, one blaze of light, reminds the European of the "Thousand and one nights;" this fete lasts three days, all other business being suspended.

To the European, the narrow, ill-paved, dirty streets of an Oriental town offer many a strange, many a curious sight—eights full of interest and study; but the one-half of the Europeans in India being there to fill a duty, the real purpose of which is the attainment of an income to enable them to return home for the rest of their lives, and not the advancement of a race they can neither like nor sympathise with; and the other half being drawn there, not by any study, but for the mere single pursuit of wealth, to be also spent subsequently at home; the study of these ancient and interesting races is confined to the very few among Western whose tastes lead them to profit by their sojourn in the East.

How very little Europeans, engaged in Indian commerce, really know of the country they have travelled so many thousand miles to visit; I know hundreds who have never been beyond the Presidency town they inhabited; many who have never closed the India Gbauts, and never turned aside to visit the wondrous caves of Ellora, or the marvellous Taj at Agra; while they know every acre of ground under cotton cultivation, and can tell you all about coffee, and tea plantations, and the quantity of opium produced annually. Fortunately such men as Mount Stuart Elphinstone, Grant Duff, Orme, Macpherson, Eliot, and Dr. Wilson of Bombay, emerge from time out of the mass of obscure unknowns, and shed a lustre on and show a knowledge of our Indian Empire, without which, it would be still as closed a book to us, as are now China and Japan, Thibet and Tartary.

No. IV.

"Boy, pey lao," is a familiar cry among Europeans in India, and scarcely have the sacramental words been heard, ere the mild Hindoo is seen approaching with a tall tumbler containing a goodly lump of ice, the brandy bottle, and a bottle of soda-pani. Everybody has a boy. I don't mean the filial descendant, commonly designed by that word, but a valet, who, whether he be 18 or 60, is equally known as a boy, popularly supposed to be an Anglicism of the word "bhai"—brother.

The proper thing, say the griffin's old Indian acquaintances, "the proper thing, you know, is to give the nigger a good kicking, if he don't do as he's told—there's no other way; in these degenerate days, its just as well, you know, to do it without witnesses." So my little friend, Jones, being one day "gussi" with his boy, locked him in his bathroom for the purpose of giving him, as he then and there told him, "a good thrashing and mind you," added Jones, "it's no use your howling out, for there's not a soul within hearing." Poor Jones! his "boy" being about twice his own size, and finding they were indeed alone, forgot his position, forgot the superiority of the lordly white race, lost his accustomed awe, and gave his sahib the thrashing he should have received. Poor old Jones always took care, in future, to choose small "boys." Years ago, there is little doubt that Europeans used to look upon the native as a nigger, and treat him in accordance; but the days of Judge Impey and Warren Hastings have gone for ever, and a European cannot now send his servant to the nearest magistrate "for a good flogging." An excellent story, by-the-bye, is told of a magistrate, who, perceiving in the cachicen, the native butler of a friend, with a note for himself, concluded it was for the usual thing, and without opening the missive ordered the man "two dozen" at once; a short time later, opening the note, he found that instead of requesting a "corrector for bearer" it was an invite to dinner; the Judge hastened to stop the punishment; it was too late. "Knock pur sanye"—"never mind, boy," said our friend, "it shall count for next time; tell your sahib I'll be with him at seven."

The expense of living in India, especially in Bombay, is very great, and has increased of late years to a terrible extent; thus it is scarcely possible to rent a cool, comfortable bungalow under £30 to £40 per mensem, or to live with any degree of comfort and position, as a married man, under £1 000 per annum.

As I said before, the European in India, considering himself a sojourner—only there for a limited number of years, and always looking forward to return to "Home, sweet home" (where the thermometer marks 65° and snow falls in a dune), mets with much discomfort and expense which he would otherwise, where he a permanent dweller, or a colonist, avoid. It is a short-sighted policy, even from his own point of view, for he runs a greater risk and incurs greater expense in lodgings. The fact is, Bombay is terribly behind-hand in everything; and it is a disgrace and a reproach that the second city and the first port of the British Empire should be without quays, without proper docks, without sufficient accommodation, in one word, for man or for trade. However, the evil must bring its own remedy; for, as I suspect, we shall eventually have to look to India for our principal supplies of cotton. British capital will find its way there, to prove to native insurers that hoarding and avarice are not conducive to advancement, civilisation, or success.

Formerly the bugbear in India was the climate; now it is the expense of living. I hope yet to see the day when a cool handsome villa may be rented in Bombay for a hundred a year, and a reasonable amount suffice for the necessaries of life and comfort, which is certainly far from being the case just now.

Every new arrival in India brings a theory of his own for his guidance in living there, and it is amusing to watch each man's preconceived notions dissolve and disperse, like snow beneath the sun, after a year or two's residence. One of the most popular fallacies is, that it is absolutely necessary to take as much bodily exercise as at home, to preserve your health; and the griffin, therefore, is to be met in his early days walking away, four miles to the hour, as if he were in training; soon, however, he becomes less anxious and less assiduous; drops to two miles an hour, and wind up at last with a stroll now and then. Now, though exercise is undoubtedly beneficial to a good state of health, (and it is to sufficient want of it that I attribute the sad decline in European ladies) there is a happy medium between a violent proscribed daily walk and none at all. In India, it is not always possible to walk, and it is nearly always unpleasant, owing to the heat, and therefore, I strongly advocate riding; there's nothing like horse exercise everywhere, but especially in a hot climate; you get all the required exercise, and you get it pleasantly—if you know how to ride.

I once thought that the Bois de Boulogne could furnish some good specimens of equitation—haute ecole, let us call it. The Frenchman, out on a Sunday, got up specially with velvet coat, tight pantaloons, and riding boots, is grand; the way in which he carries himself, the tight grasp of the hand upon the rein, almost pulling off his steed's head, the nervous glance at his horse's ears from time to time, the whip carefully carried downwards in the right hand, and the evident effort to appear un cavalier parfait, is a study; but I'm not sure whether I have not seen better specimens in Bombay. It certainly is not a pretty sight to see an equestrian bolt upright in his saddle, his two legs acting like the pendulum of an excited clock, an anxious and troubled expression on his Pentonic countenance, holding on like grim death by the pommel with one hand, while the other serves to keep his "topi" on. Fortunately, the Bombay native does not ride, as a rule (thought I have seen a few Parsees making fools of themselves in this way), and I suppose the energetic way in which the griffin bumps up and down upon his bucephalus—pardon, Arab steed, I should say—showing enough daylight each time between himself and saddle to send a cannon ball right through, without touching either, is excellent for liver. The only thing I would suggest is, that the griffin should avoid the hard-stand where he is fond of showing off, to his own admiration, and the danger of those who may be in his way.

A wealthy gentleman who owns a country seat nearly lost his wife, who fell into a river which flows through his estate. He announced the narrow escape to his friends, expecting their congratulations. One of them—an old bachelor—wrote as follows:—"I always told you that river was too shallow."
